The Right Thing

General Manager

The board has approved giving a refund to our members on the upcoming December bills.

On my desk, I have two quotes that I read almost every day. The first is a quote from Mark Twain stating, “You’re never wrong to do the right thing.” To me this describes the core of how decisions are made at your cooperative.

Over the years, I have shared with you how your cooperative has a tradition of caring for our members and our communities. This is what separates cooperatives from other types of utilities and businesses. We’ve always taken this mission and responsibility to heart. It’s who we are as a co-op.

Over the past year, like so many of you, we’ve risen to meet new challenges. Because of the pandemic, we have strived to do the right thing and have made numerous adjustments to maintain business and to help our members.

Unfortunately, this past month we had to close our offices to the general public due to low employee numbers. Our employee group has been hit hard by the virus. Despite the number of employees being sent home, we have worked hard to maintain service to you.

The pandemic has changed how we have operated this past year, but it has not slowed us down. The operations department installed 78 miles of new underground line which replaced 90 miles of vintage overhead line. The crews also installed about 6 miles of underground line to new services along with all the normal maintenance activities. This was a significant increase in their work load, and they delivered for you.

Financially, your cooperative looks different than we projected for 2021. Our revenues are down but so are the expenses. The end result is our margins are much better than we have budgeted. So much better that the board has approved giving a refund to our members on the upcoming December bills. The amount of the refund is yet to be determined, but it will be approved by the board at the December meeting. It is the right thing to do.

In this newsletter, you will read about your Operation Round-Up program. This program allows you to do the right thing and “round up” the amount due on your electric bill to help improve our communities. We also do many other things from youth programs to economic development activities. All in an effort to improve our quality of life.

We have a strong commitment to safety--not just for our employees, but for our community as well. Due to the pandemic, we are finding new ways to teach children to stay safe around electricity. We educate first responders on electric safety and hold safety demonstrations at community meetings and other gatherings.

You’ll see your employees serving on local boards, coaching youth sports, and volunteering at charitable events. Because when you work at a co-op, you understand how important a strong community is--after all, without you, the co-op wouldn’t exist.

We know our core job is to keep the lights on; but our passion is for safety and our community. We live and work here too, and we want to make it a better place for all.

The second quote I read every day is by Robert Frost. “Don’t ever take a fence down until you know why it was put up.” This reminds me of the importance of long relationships with our members, and our vendors, partners and associations who have a vested interest in our success. Not just for the short term but for long into our future.

Our mission has never been more important. Thank you for your continued support as we look towards the New Year. No matter what the future brings, you can count on your electric co-op to care about you.

Have a Blessed and Safe Holiday Season!

National Cut Your Energy Costs Day

If you resolved to spend less and save more in 2021, cutting back on a few regular expenses is a good place to start. Sunday, Jan. 10, is National Cut Your Energy Costs Day, so we've rounded up a few tips to help you trim your utility bills without making major lifestyle changes.

- Cut heating and cooling costs. We spend a great deal of energy heating our homes in the winter and keeping them cool in the summer, but are we really doing our best to minimize the cost of our comfort? A programmable thermostat can allow you to adjust the temperature when you're out of the house or sleeping. There's no reason to blast the heat when everyone is at work, and it's doubtful you need to sleep with the hot air on high. So program your schedule into your thermostat, and it'll do all the work for you.
- Watch out for energy draining appliances. Big appliances like refrigerators, washers and dryers consume a lot of energy, so the next time you replace one of these appliances, upgrade to an energy-efficient Energy Star-certified model. These are designed to use much less energy than their older counterparts and often end up paying for themselves in savings over time. Keep these appliances clean and well maintained to ensure optimal performance and efficiency.
- Pull the plug. As we continue to be more and more "plugged in," it should come as no surprise that a greater proportion of our energy goes toward keeping our devices charged. To keep costs reasonable, plug electronics into a power strip and turn it off when they're not in use. This cuts off "phantom" usage and can save you a bundle. Some newer power strips even include an automatic shut-off feature.
- Hit the lights. As always, turn off the lights when leaving a room. You can also swap out light bulbs to increase your home's energy efficiency. Replace incandescent bulbs with LED versions for an easy and affordable way to save on electricity. Not only do LEDs last significantly longer, they also require much less energy.
- Start with a simple home assessment. Interested to know how your home's energy use compares to similar homes? Check out Energy Star's Home Energy Yardstick at energystar.gov to learn how much of your home's energy use is related to heating and cooling versus other appliance use, lighting and hot water.

SD TOURISM GOING STRONG

Tired of Being Shut In: Visitors Flock to South Dakota

Billy Gibson

billy.gibson@sdrea.coop

Probably the last time a member of the Husted family was worried about going broke, it was back in the 1930s.

Ted and Dorothy Husted had just purchased a small drug store in Wall and were having a hard time getting the business to grow in the middle of a severe drought and the Great Depression.

The business that went on to become known as Wall Drug has been named one of the busiest tourist attractions in the northern part of the country. The prospects of the Husteds going broke have been very slim since the store hit its stride.

That is until last March.

Third-generation owner Rick Husted won't lie: he was downright worried that Wall Drug might bite the dust when COVID-19 prompted lockdowns and travel restrictions.

The entire operation – the stores, the restaurants, the galleries and even the free ice water – came grinding to a stop for 71 days just as the travel season was about to kick into gear.

“I was afraid we might go broke and we might not make it. They're projecting that half of the restaurants out there are going to close down permanently,” Husted said. “We were closed that whole time and had to cut back on our employees because we felt that trying to ‘flatten the curve’ was the right thing to do.”

The business reported losses through the summer, but returned to the black in August due in part to traffic from the Sturgis motorcycle rally. Husted reported that September and October also showed considerable increases over 2019 numbers.

“People just got tired of being shut in and they got in their cars and on their motorcycles and their RVs and came to South Dakota,” he said, noting that even President Trump made his way to Mount Rushmore for a Fourth of July gathering.

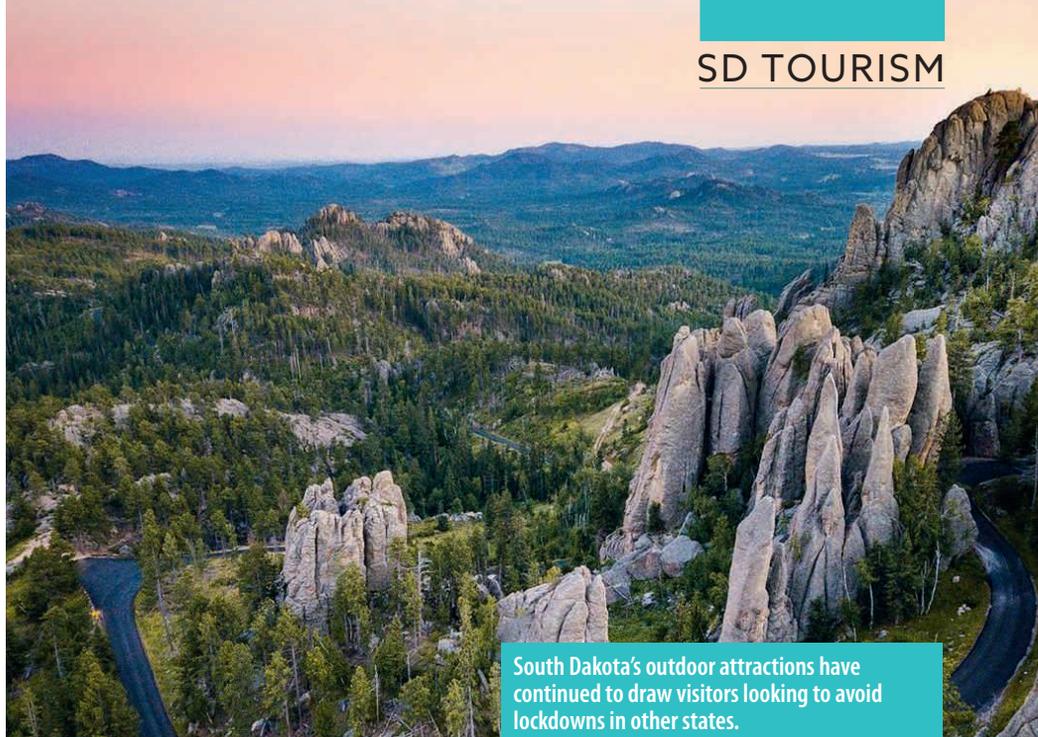

The annual Buffalo Round Up at Custer State Park continues to attract visitors from throughout the country.

South Dakota's outdoor attractions have continued to draw visitors looking to avoid lockdowns in other states.

Hustead said he took public safety measures such as installing Plexiglas barriers, posting hand-sanitizer stations and requiring that employees wear masks. He said no employees have been known to contract the coronavirus. The bottom line also received a boost from some federal relief money.

Once the financial fog lifted, Hustead called his mother Marjorie – who is in a care facility in Rapid City but is “still involved in the business” – and told her he felt Wall Drug was going to make it through the crisis after all.

“I told her, ‘Mom, I think we’re going to make it.’ And that made her happy,” Hustead said.

He was quick to heap praise on the South Dakota Office of Tourism and leader Jim Hagen.

In assessing the state of tourism in South Dakota, officials paint a picture similar to Hustead. While many annual events have been canceled or postponed to a later date, outdoor events and activities such as Sturgis, walleye fishing, pheasant hunting and the many outdoor tourist attractions have led to a healthy industry performance and outlook.

Hagen's office has also taken the initiative to develop innovative programs to ensure that South Dakota stays top-of-mind when people throughout the region and nation make their travel plans.

The department recently launched an on-line learning program for children and their families to learn more about South Dakota and experience the attractions of the state from the comfort of their homes or in a classroom setting. There are eight virtual pages that allow site visitors to learn more about the icons, wildlife, people and history of the state, each featuring games and activities for the entire family to explore.

“These online lessons provide an opportunity to educate children and adults alike about our state's Great Faces and Great Places,” said Gov. Kristi Noem. “We hope that they are used as a tool to engage families and inspire them to explore our great state.”

The department also partnered with Badlands National Park to promote its virtual Junior Ranger program. Once the virtual exploration is complete, kids can become official Badlands National Park Junior Rangers.

Last summer, the department teamed up with tourism officials in Wyoming to develop a program called “Black to Yellow” to entice travelers to explore scenic routes that wind from the Badlands National Park to Wyoming's iconic Yellowstone National Park.

To help travelers plan their trip, the states put together itineraries that explore their most well-known attractions and lesser-known gems. From taking in roadside stops, like Wall Drug and Wyoming's Devils Tower, to exploring the scenery of Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area and Badlands National Park, travelers were encouraged to explore the beauty of the states' wide open spaces, unparalleled wildlife and the freedom of the open road.

State tourism leaders will meet in Pierre on Jan. 20-21 for the 2021 Governor's Conference on Tourism. There will be limited in-person engagement as well as an online attendance option. The theme for this year's meeting is, “Onward!” While 2020 could have been worse, leaders are hoping that travel will continue to be a significant economic driver in the state.

Wall Drug shut down for 71 days last spring but rebounded to have a successful 2020.

Ice fishing is a pursuit that's enjoyed each winter by South Dakotans of every stripe.

Guys, Gals and Castles on Ice

South Dakotans Stay in Hot Pursuit of Cold Fish

Billy Gibson

billy.gibson@sdrea.coop

What happens if you hold an ice fishing tournament and it turns out there's no ice?

You improvise.

That's what organizers of the annual Mobridge Ice Fishing Tournament had to do 10 years ago when Mother Nature refused to cooperate and left them scrambling to come up with a Plan B.

At that time, the tournament was just gaining traction as a main winter attraction for Mobridge. No one dreamed that what started as just a handful of anglers vying to win an ice auger has grown into a field that's capped at 525 two-person teams arriving from 16 different states.

Jeff Jackson is owner of the Wrangler Inn in Mobridge and one of the founders of the tournament marking its 20th anniversary this year. He remembers a bit of panic setting in when hundreds of fishermen were scheduled to descend on Mobridge and the ice on the Missouri River wasn't thick enough to ensure the safety of competitors. Fortunately, the organizing committee had scheduled enough attractions and activities around the one-day tournament that there was plenty for the eager visitors to do.

"We got the word out that the competition was canceled, but 420 out of the 450 teams that were registered showed up anyway," Jackson recalls. "They wanted to come and have a good time."

Those non-angling activities included raffles and prize drawings, an expo featuring all the latest fishing gear, gizmos and gadgets, and according to Jackson, lots of libations.

"People keep coming back year after year," Jackson said, noting that the town's population doubles in the second week of each January. "We've had to limit the number of participants so we have an Ebay auction for three spots that can go as high as $3,000, and we have another lottery drawing for 26 spots where we usually have up to 800 names."

Instead of a simple ice auger as a grand prize, today the tournament gives away roughly $225,000 in prizes, including Ice

Castles, four-wheelers, a Polaris Ranger, $5,000 worth of Scheel's gear, $3,000 in Runnings gear, clam shacks and more.

The tournament is a boon for Mobridge, bringing an economic impact of $500,000. According to Jesse Konold, chairman of the town's tourism committee, over the past four years proceeds paid for South Dakota's first climate-controlled indoor fish cleaning station, ADA compliant bathrooms, improvements to the town's rodeo grounds and more than $100,000 in donations to local non-profits. This year's tournament will be held Jan. 7-9 at the Sherr-Howe Center in Mobridge.

Not Everyone is Hooked

Among the state's population of electric cooperative linemen, there are many who look forward to chasing walleye in winter. In Josh Lemburg's case, the term "chasing" walleye would be close to accurate.

Lemburg, operations foreman at Moreau-Grand Electric who lives in Timber Lake, prefers to stay on the move when he fishes on the ice. Eschewing the "ice castle" approach that calls for staking out a spot and staying put for the weekend, Lemburg uses a portable flip-over shack and keeps his auger close at hand.

"Ice castles are fun, but I'm not afraid to move around and dig holes," he said. "If I'm not catching fish in an hour, I'll 'run-and-gun' til I find them."

Even with his "move-and-groove" approach, Lemburg has failed to get his entire family sold on the merits of ice fishing. Even hooking a lunker walleye didn't convince his son to swear a life-long oath to ice fishing.

Several years ago, Lemburg took his dad and his elementary-age kids, Landon and Kendal, out on the ice. His dad and daughter were in one shack and he and Landon were in the other. After a few hours, just as Landon was getting bored and ready to call it a day, a walleye snatched his bait.

"Landon had his line in the water and I saw a big mark on my Vexilar," Lemburg recalls. "I told him he had a big fish on the line but he just gave me his pole and said he wasn't interested. I kept trying to get him to reel it in, but he kept giving me the pole back. Finally, I got the fish to the surface I looked in the hole and there was nothing but fish. My dad reached down in the water to his armpits and it was a 12-pound walleye."

He and his wife, Tandy, have actually both claimed titles at the prestigious Mobridge tournament. One particular year the husband-and-wife duo were on separate teams. Brent was on the first-place team and Tandy and her partner placed second. But Tandy believes she has her husband beat: her second-place finish was clinched by reeling in a 25-inch walleye while she was six months pregnant.

The two have always had pretty good luck with the raffles and random prize drawings as well. Tandy won a side-by-side one year and a family friend has won two four-wheelers.

"We just love being outdoors in the winter when there's nothing else to do," Reilley said. "You can get outside and enjoy the fresh air. It gets cold, but it beats sitting inside and it's something great to do with the family. My son is addicted. He'd love it if all he could do is fish all day."

Seasonal Affective Disorder impacts roughly 10 million Americans each year. Experts are anticipating a rise in cases after many months of dealing with COVID-19.

BEATING SAD

Here's How to Treat and Beat Seasonal Affective Disorder

For years, the mental disorder now known as Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD) was given about as much credibility as Big Foot and the Loch Ness monster.

It was common folk knowledge that certain times of the year brought on what was passed off as the “winter blues” or the “winter doldrums.” But through considerable study and extensive research over the course of time, the psychiatric community eventually determined that SAD is not only a real affliction related to clinical depression, but according to the National Institute of Health it impacts an estimated 10 million Americans each year.

Women are more likely to contract the condition than men, and in most cases symptoms can begin appearing in early adulthood. Those with pre-existing mental conditions such as bipolar disorder, attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder, anxiety disorder and others are also at significantly greater risk.

And while so much attention has been given to the coronavirus since the spring of 2020, SAD is yet another health risk that continues to afflict the U.S. population and especially those residing in northern regions of the country.

Mental health professionals share a concern that those who are susceptible to SAD will experience an even greater struggle in 2021 and have more difficulty managing their symptoms during the winter months after nearly a year of dealing with the forced shutdowns and isolation caused by COVID-19.

Both employees and members of South Dakota’s electric cooperative system are prone to experiencing the impact of SAD as the winter season sets in, according to Mark Patterson, Director of Safety and Loss Control at the South Dakota Rural Electric Association (SDREA) in Pierre.

Patterson and his accredited safety team at SDREA provide a variety of field and workplace training programs for the state’s cooperative network, and they advise everyone to be aware of the signs and symptoms of SAD and to seek treatment if needed.

“These long South Dakota winters can be harsh,” Patterson said. “But in order for our cooperative employees to be at their best and perform at the top of their game, we need to make sure we’re mindful of our risk of experiencing not only physical ailments that can limit our capabilities but mental ailments as well. That also goes for all of our cooperative members that we serve. If you're feeling the onset of depression and having difficulty coping, don't hesitate to reach out and find the help you need."

The most commonly reported symptoms associated with SAD include significant fatigue, pervasively sad mood, loss of interest in activities, sleeping more hours than usual, difficulty concentrating and eating more starches and sweets.

Experts also point out that the "seasonal" in SAD doesn't necessarily refer to winter, although symptoms occur most commonly in January and February. Clinical depression can also occur in the spring and summer months, a condition known as summer-pattern SAD.

For winter-pattern SAD, a gradual decrease in photoperiod – or daylight - is the primary trigger and the strongest predictor of daily mood swings in individuals. Researchers have identified a direct relationship with the number of cases that rise and fall depending on available sunlight and change in temperature in a particular year. Sunlight prompts the body to produce hormones, which has a direct impact on a person's mood. For instance, inconsistent levels of the neurotransmitter

Signs and Symptoms of SAD

- Feeling depressed most of the day, nearly every day
- Losing interest in activities you once enjoyed
- Experiencing changes in appetite or weight
- Having problems with sleep
- Feeling sluggish or agitated
- Having low energy
- Feeling hopeless or worthless
- Having difficulty concentrating
- Having frequent thoughts of death or suicide
- Oversleeping (hypersomnia)
- Overeating, particularly with a craving for carbohydrates serotonin can alter moods while changes in melatonin levels can interrupt sleep cycles.

Mental health providers are bracing for an anticipated increase in cases of SAD this year due to the pandemic and lockdown. Those with underlying mental conditions who are especially sensitive to stress could face severe challenges.

According to Tracy Romey, a board certified psychiatric mental health nurse practitioner in Hot Springs, those susceptible to SAD should not despair; many forms of treatment are available.

"This is the time of year we start seeing more cases of SAD. Anxiety can be a component of SAD, which negatively impacts everyday functioning," she said. "The good news is that it can be treated and usually improves when spring arrives."

Romey added that treatment is often tailored to the individual and can be directed toward certain prevailing symptoms.

"There is no specific test for SAD, however, the same treatments prescribed for a major seasonal depressive disorder may be effective for seasonal affective disorder, including light therapy, vitamin D replacement therapy and medications. Other options include spending more time outdoors and exercise. I encourage anyone who is negatively affected by seasonal change to see your mental health provider and receive an evaluation."
